THE PARK OF FRIENDSHIP IN NEW BELGRADE A Living Monument of Peace and Solidarity

Abstract: The Park of Friendship in New Belgrade was constructed in 1961 as a commemoration of the First Non-Aligned Summit in Belgrade. This Park has offered leaders, visitors of the city the opportunity of planting their trees in the Park to symbolize Friendship, and hope, and a purpose of better life in all parts of the world. This article discusses the background and presents a number of facts concerning the Park of Friendship. Furthermore, there is a comparison between the Park of Friendship and the global situation in the second half of the 20th century. The Park was visited almost 200 world leaders since the founding of the Non-Aligned Movement and the First Conference of Non-Aligned Countries until the end of the 20th century. The practice was to plant a tree that was a significant mark of the Friendship and solidarity, and the desire of peace. To ensure that information about the Park of Friendship is kept, this article gives a list of all countries and the heads of state who have planted their trees.

As time had passed the world changed: by overall progress, but also by a turbulent events. Some of countries do not exist anymore. Some of leaders from the Park finished their political carrier, sometimes a life, under tragic circumstances. By consulting available sources a review of their later life is presented.

Finally, the emerging urban plans of the city of Belgrade may result in the permanent destruction of this monument place that is Yugoslav and, to put it mildly, a monument place to the entire world. Hence, this paper is a call to preserve the Park of Friendship in the form of the memorial site since it is encrypted in the Cultural heritage register of Serbia, besides other values.

1. Introduction

The Park of Friendship in New Belgrade (Sr. Park prijateljstva) was planned as a living peace and international unity memorial in the early 1960s. The Park was constituted during the first meeting of the Non-Aligned Movement held in 1961 in the city of Belgrade. [1,2] Planted with trees by world leaders - presidents, monarchs, and prime ministers - it became a symbolic landscape that embodied Yugoslavia's ambition to position itself as a mediator in a bipolar world.

Some authors have looked at the Park through urban design and Cold War diplomatic history and socialist cultural production lens. This paper introduce a layer as it looks at the Park as a world leaders' scrapbook, with each tree being a hope and a piece of political fate.

The article also covers the later life some of them: some of whom would be killed, overthrown, or disgraced. This contrast renders the Park a place of collective memory but also an archive building of sarcasm, delicate nature and evolving historical interpretation.

2. Global context of the 1960s

The early 1960s witnessed heightened geopolitical rivalry. The Cold War divided the planet into two hostile spheres which included the United States with NATO allies standing against the Soviet Union and its Warsaw Pact bloc. People lived under nuclear war threat because of international crises like Berlin (1961) and the Cuban Missile Crisis (1962). The superpowers tried to force smaller countries and recently independent nations to choose their side.

Meanwhile, there was a wave of decolonization that transformed the international order. African and Asian countries that got independence from European colonial empires were dozens but their economies and political systems were not strong and secure. Most of these states refused to become the pawns in the Cold War. They wanted a platform that would honour their independence and development objectives. This desire led to the formation of the Non-Aligned Movement, which offered to collaborate with other entities but not the East-West tension. [3]

The decision to join the Non-Aligned Movement was based on economic and political and geographical ties with the affected countries. (Figure 1)

The graph was created by AI ChatBot. Ranks of nodes confirm that the most influenced countries were Yugoslavia, Egypt (in Africa), India (in Asia), and Cuba (in Middle America).

3. Belgrade and the birth of the non-aligned movement

Josip Broz Tito, who was the head of socialist Yugoslavia, was instrumental in the planning of the Non-Aligned Nations conference and the development of the concept of non-alignment. Josip Broz Tito, together with such leaders as Jawaharlal Nehru of India, Gamal Abdel Nasser of Egypt and Kwame Nkrumah of Ghana, advocated Yugoslavia as a link between the East and the West. [3] Yugoslavia opted for its own course after the Tito-Stalin conflict in 1948, unlike other socialist nations. This independence made Belgrade a credible host for the summit and allowed Tito to emerge as a respected statesman among the leaders of the developing world.[4]

The meeting of the founding of the Non-Aligned Countries was hosted by Belgrade in September 1961 and brought together leaders of 25 countries and representatives of various liberation movements (Figure 2 and Figure 3). It was an experience that went down in history as the first time when quite a significant number of countries declared their desire to remain neutral and autonomous, and co-exist peacefully. [5]

The Non-Aligned Movement preached not political neutrality but it included a focus on peaceful co-existence, disarmament and economic cooperation, and respect of countries. [6] During the Conference the Park of Friendship was constructed to symbolize this idea and unity among countries.

4. The creation of the park of friendship

To commemorate the First Non-Aligned Summit, the Park of Friendship opened in 1961. Located in the newly built district of New Belgrade (Figure 4), the Park was designed not just as a recreational space but as a symbolic landscape of unity. [2]

The main idea was simple and yet profound. All the visiting heads of state and kings and prime ministers could plant a tree to the Park as a sign of Friendship and peace. Plane tree (platanus) was selected as the species to be used and it is reputed to have a long life span and can survive in different environments. Its deep roots and wide branches were meant to show power, stability, and the emerging relations between the countries. The trees built the “Avenue of Peace” (Sr. Aleja mira) and many of the international leaders added to the living monument. (Figure 5)

The Park was envisaged in accordance with the vision of Tito. He personally participated in the ceremonial plantings, and his presence gave the space political and emblematic weight. The first tree in the Park of Friendship was planted on 7 September 1961 by Josip Broz Tito, the host of the Summit (Figure 6 and Figure 7) and Gamal Abdel Nasser (Figure 8 and Figure 9).

Josip Broz Tito's international stature was crucial for the Park's further development. As one of the key architects of the Non-Aligned Movement, he was frequently visited by world leaders. Each visit offered an opportunity to expand the "Avenue of Peace". Thus, the Park gradually became a unique diplomatic archive, inscribed besides in documents also in living trees. The list of trees is reviewed in the Table 1.

Since the 1960s to 1980s and until 2000 a high number of prominent individuals throughout the world participated in the tradition. Indira Gandhi of India, Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia, Willy Brandt of West Germany (Figure 8), Richard Nixon of United States, Queen Elizabeth II of Great Britain (Figure 9) and Col Muammar Gaddafi of Libya and many others were among them. By late 1980s the Park had almost two hundreds of trees and each tree was dedicated to a certain dignitary who had planted a tree, marked by the name at the stone plaque.

As time passed, the Park of Friendship had become a small, neutral territory, where politicians, of sometimes confronted countries, has planted a tree: South - North Vietnam (Figure 10 and Figure 11); USSR (Figure 12 and Figure 13), Cuba - USA (Figure 14 and Figure 15); West Germany - East Germany, India - Pakistan, Iraq - Iran, etc.

There were four major periods of change that the Park underwent, which were between 1961 and 1969, then between 1970 and 1979, and then after the death of Tito in 1980. The complete list of planted trees and plaques are reviewed in the APPENDIX I.

5. Violent, dramatic, or historic ends of leaders from the Park of Friendship

The lives of many of these leaders later took dramatic turns, and their trees in Belgrade stand today as poignant reminders of both their aspirations and their fates. Indira Gandhi, who planted her tree during a visit in the 1960s (Figure 16), was assassinated in 1984. Her son Rajiv Gandhi, who continued her political legacy (Figure 17), met the same tragic end in 1991.

Emperor Haile Selassie, once celebrated as a symbol of African independence, was overthrown in 1974 and later murdered in captivity (Figure 18), Swedish Prime Minister Sven Olof Joachim Palme assassinated on 28 February 1986, Col Muammar Gaddafi, president of Libya was killed during the Civil war and NATO campaign in 2011 (Figure 19), Willy Brandt, the Nobel Prize-winning chancellor of West Germany, was forced to resign in 1974 after a major espionage scandal, known as Günter Guillaume affair.

The first American president to plant a tree in Belgrade was Richard Nixon. In 1974, he resigned because of the Watergate scandal, etc. Others, like Queen Elizabeth II, who planted her tree during a 1972 state visit, lived long enough to see the end of Yugoslavia itself.

The later lives of many leaders from the Park of Friendship were shaped by turbulent events, which did not spare the young, unstable states of Asia and Africa, nor the leading countries of the world. The list of victims of tragic events is reviewed in the Appendix II. By consulting available sources, this overview summarizes the lives of some of the leaders who planted their tree in the Park of Friendship.

These examples illustrate how the Park of Friendship became more than a ceremonial space: it turned into a living chronicle of international politics. The trees still grow, even as many of the leaders who planted them met violent, dramatic, or historic ends.

6. Symbolism and legacy

The Park of Friendship is not a mere green space. It is a product of political symbolism. The trees planted represent the promises of Friendship, unity and mutual respect. They embody the spirit of peace between the states and the Non-Aligned Movement in general. It symbolized the ambition of Yugoslavia to make a moral statement in world politics. The Park represented Friendship hence life, growth and harmony rather than other monuments that honour military achievements. (Figure 20) The Park of Friendship took the form of a peaceful monument that advocated hope for a better future other than the traditional monuments that remembered the dead and the destroyers.

Figure 20. The “Avenue of Peace” in the Park of Friendship (Z. Cvetković, 13 June 2025)

Even after Yugoslavia collapsed and the political collapse of the 1990s, and when the world transformed, this Park remains a monument of a different approach to countries interacting with each other. The trees still remain in the avenue with their silent witnesses of years after years of diplomatic activities. To the present generation of visitors, the trees depict a period when Belgrade was an essential point of international conversation among countries.

The Park of Friendship became not only a symbol of international goodwill and a demonstration of Yugoslav diplomatic success. The Park of Friendship is a monument to international solidarity and, at same time, demonstrates the international diplomatic success of Yugoslavia.

7. The place of the Park of Friendship in the belgrade’s urban redevelopments

Belgrade's urban modifications, already made and future ones, generate intense disagreements among people. The first group involves ordinary people together with professional specialists who work as architects and urban planners and art historians. The second group involves the current political authorities who lead Serbia. The most controversial issue that generates maximum opposition involves three events. The first is the destruction of the Sava Tram Bridge. The second event involves the rumoured demolition of the Belgrade Fair. The third event involves the complete renovation of the Terazije Terrace located in Belgrade's central area.

The Serbian Parliament made its most controversy decision when it officially permitted the demolition of General Staff buildings which suffered damage from NATO bombing in 1999. (Figure 21) This decision received widespread attention not just in Serbia but throughout international media outlets [7,8]. The protected status of these buildings as cultural properties under Serbian law triggered responses from international cultural property protection organizations [9].

The current situation places The Park of Friendship as a secondary concern compared to the already mentioned events. The newest approved urban development plan of New Belgrade demonstrates that the Park of Friendship has been renamed to the Complex of the Park of Friendship Complex. Although there has been an insignificant change in the name, it provides an opportunity to build unidentified facilities in the Park, which will consequently result in the destruction and total elimination of the Park. [10] In 2024 the Park of Friendship was absorbed into the CONFLUENCE (Sr. UŠĆE) development project (a section of New Belgrade, located at the confluence of Sava and Danube rivers). [11] In the new, winning conceptual design (Figure 22), the aquarium and panoramic wheel are the main objects, but The Park of Friendship is no more. [12]

8. Conclusion

The Park of Friendship may be visualized not only as a building project created by the Yugoslav government but also as a historical artefact of the Non-Aligned Movement. In some cases it embodies a story that brings the tree-planting friendly ceremonies into direct opposition with the tragic lives of their organisers, Indira Gandhi and Rajiv Gandhi were assassinated, Haile Selassie was overthrown and assassinated, Willy Brandt and Richard Nixon were forced to resign. The approach of perceiving the Park as a scrapbook informs one about the value of international solidarity, but sometimes discovers a short-term nature of political Friendships. The frame of interpretation provides an understanding that the Park in Belgrade is presently used as a recreational area and at the same time a historical record of 20th-century international political activities that are incorporated in the landscape.

Nowadays urban planners must ensure the Park and memory trees remain part of their plans. Also, the existing plaques with inscriptions about person who seeded the tree are to be conserved and protected, as some of them are damaged or totally destroyed. Instead of demolition and destruction the Park of Friendship could additionally become a unique place to exhibit and host some abandon artefacts that represent Yugoslav history from the second part of the XX century and remanence to Yugoslav socialism. Therefore, this article is an appeal to spare the Park as memorial place, as it unscripted in the Serbian Register of the cultural heritage. [13]

Cyprus	President Archbishop Makarios III (13 Aug 13, 1913–3 Aug 3 1977)	Coup d'état on 15 July 1974 [3]. He went in exile. Later on he had come back serving as the president during 7 Decembre 1974 – 3 August 1977.
Indonesia	President Ahmed Soekarno (6 June 1901–21 June 1970)	Coup d'état on 1 October 1965 was crashed by General Suharto. [4] On 12 March 1967 General Suharto put Sukarno under house arrest where he was until death on 21 June 1970.
Ethiopia	Emperor Haile Selassie (23 July 1892–27 Aug 1975)	Military coup on 12 September 1974. [5] “Haile Selassie was kept under house arrest in his own palace, where he spent the remainder of his life. Official sources at the time attributed his death to natural causes, but evidence later emerged suggesting that he had been strangled on the orders of the military government.” [6]
Algeria	President Ahmed Ben Bella, (25 Dec 25–11 April 2012)	Military coup. He was overthrown on 19 June 19 1965 by military officer and collaborator Houari Boumediene. Ben Bella was arrested. He was initially held incommunicado, but later under house arrest. [7]

Central African Republic	Emperor Jean-Bédél Bokassa (22 Feb 1921–3 Nov 1996)	Military coup. Overthrown in a military coup on 20 September 1979. Bokassa had fled the country , probably for Libya. [12]
Libya	President Muammar Muhammad al-Gaddafi (1942–20 Oct 2011)	Killed during the Civil war. Col Muammar Gaddafi was killed on 20 October 2011 after a failed attempt to escape from the fighters of the National Transitional Council, supported by French aircrafts operating as part of the NATO mission. [13]
Kingdom of	Prime minister	Assassinated on 28 February 1986. The Swedish prime minister

Sweden	Sven Olof Joachim Palme (30 Jan 1927–Feb 1986)	had discharged his guards and had gone to the cinema with his wife Lisbet, their son Marten and his girlfriend. Walking with his wife after the film along Sveavägen St, they were attacked and killed by a gunman from behind. [14]
People's Republic of Congo	President Marien Ngouabi (31 Dec 1938–18 March 1977)	Assassination. Ngouabi, the military President of the Republic, was assassinated on 18 March 1977. It is speculated that Ngouabi was assassinated due to his unwillingness to collude with French authorities, who sought greater control over the oil rich Cabinda region of Angola and who urged Ngouabi to annex the region. [15]
India	Prime minister Indira Gandhi (19 Nov 1917–31 Oct 1984)	Assassination. Killed in an assassination attempt on 31 October 1984. No exact motive is known but it is believed the pair were Sikh extremists acting in retaliation for the storming of the Sikh holy shrine of the Golden Temple in Amritsar in June. [16]
FR Germany	Chancellor Willy Brandt (18 Dec 1913–8 Oct 1992)	Resignation. Resigned on 7 May 1974. Brandt accepted political and personal responsibility for neglect in connection with the Guillaume spy case. Gunther Guillaume, one of his personal aides, was arrested a fortnight ago on suspicion of being an East German spy. [17]
DR Germany	President Erich Ernst Paul Honecker (25 Aug 1912–29 May 1994)	Forced to resign on 24 October 1989. Without the support of the reform-minded Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, Honecker was forced to resign in October 1989. Later, he was charged with abuses of power and other crimes. In ill health, he was released by the German authorities in 1993 and allowed to go to Chile, where he died. [18]
Pakistan	President Muhammad Zia-ul-Haq (12 Aug 1924–17 Aug 1988)	Plane crash. Zia died in a plane crash on 17 August 1988. The investigation suspected that it was a form of sabotage that may have included the gassing of the flight crew through the use of low-intensity plastic explosives.
